School of Alcohol and Drug Studies July 19 to July 24, 2009

The Center of Alcohol Studies has been providing leadership in the education and training of professionals and policymakers since 1943 through its Division of Education and Training.

The School of Alcohol and Drug Studies is a comprehensive one-week program whose faculty are leaders in the alcohol and drug field. Participants enroll in specialized courses that provide an intensive immersion into their areas of interest, while lectures and seminars offer the opportunity to explore other topic areas.

More than sixty years of experience have resulted in a balance of academic, social and non-structured time. The congenial atmosphere encourages interaction and networking among a student body that is geographically diverse and has a rich mixture of professional roles.

The School for 2009 will be held on the College Avenue Campus of Rutgers University in New Brunswick, New Jersey, with convenient access via car, bus and train to New York City and Philadelphia.

Rutgers University grants Continuing Education Units (CEUs), which are equivalent to contact hours toward certification/recertification in most states.

Hours have been submitted for approval for certification/recertification.

The Rutgers School of Alcohol and Drug Studies has been approved by the National Association of Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Counselors (NAADAC).

Detailed information on the school, including course listings, fees, applications, etc., can be found on the Center of Alcohol Studies website as follows:
